After the historic UN speech, and the successful elimination of Nasrallah, Bibi Netanyahu met with Jewish leaders, and told Lubavitchers how he remembered the Rebbe’s words.

After the historic speech at the United Nations General Assembly, and after confirming the elimination of Hezbollah leader Nasrallah, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu entered a meeting with Jewish leaders from across the U.S., who congratulated him on his powerful speech and the incredible strike.

The meeting also included Rabbi Zalman Zevulunov and Rabbi Levi Yitzchak Wolovik, heads of the Ohr Avner Chabad-Lubavitch educational network in the U.S., established by philanthropist R’ Levi Leviev.

Rabbi Zevulunov shook the Prime Minister's hand and mentioned the 45-minute conversation the Prime Minister had during his first meeting with the Rebbe, which took place 40 years ago on Simchas Torah night, during hakafos at 770.

The Prime Minister expressed his gratitude for these remarks, stating that he never forgets the Rebbe's prophetic and detailed words to him: "Believe me, I haven't forgotten what the Rebbe told me!" Netanyahu told the shluchim.
