Prime Minister Bibi Netanyahu met with shluchim from Eretz Yisroel and around the globe on Wednesday at the Prime Minister's Office in Yerushalayim, in honor of 30 years since Gimmel Tammuz.

Attending the meeting alongside Netanyahu were Cabinet Secretary Yossi Fuchs, Chabad on Campus COO Rabbi Avi Weinstein, Chabad on Campus Israel Director Rabbi Moshe Shilat, and Harvard University shliach Rabbi Hirschy Zarchi, among other shluchim from various regions.

Speaking in English, Netanyahu shared his personal experience with the Rebbe, stating, “I saw the Rebbe for the first time on Simchas Torah, 42 years ago. He emphasized three things: ‘Ahavas Yisrael, defend Eretz Yisrael, and fight the lies.’”

Referencing the historical struggles of the Jewish people, Netanyahu said, “In each generation, they rise up to destroy us, but G-d will redeem us from their hands. However, we must also take action ourselves.”

Netanyahu continued, “We are combating threats in Gaza, Lebanon, and other parts of the Middle East. It’s essential to also fight the battle for public opinion, justice, and solidarity with our besieged people. We can win this war, and in fact, we are winning it, thanks to the bravery of our soldiers who are incredible heroes.”

He stressed the importance of countering slander and ending the conflict swiftly, saying, “The quicker we end this war, the sooner we can fend off the defamers.”

Netanyahu’s core message to the emissaries was resilience: “The most important message I have for you is don’t bend, don’t cower, don’t surrender—not to these antisemitic lies, not to the fear, not to the intimidation.”

He concluded by reinforcing the Rebbe’s teachings: “You are our ambassadors in the spirit of the Rebbe. The Rebbe told me, ‘You will be the ambassador of the Jewish people in the Hall of Darkness,’ referring to the United Nations. He urged me to ‘light a candle of truth, stand up against our enemies, and advocate for our people and our land.’ This message is now more critical and necessary than ever. Carry this message of truth to our people and the world.”
